A Word from The President

The other day I ran into a member who said, I've got an idea for HomePorts. Why don't you start a volunteer recognition program? I thought of this because I am so grateful to _____ for his help. He has just been so extremely nice to me, dependable, and cheery, and I want to thank him!"

Muriel Cole

So I put this to our volunteer coordinators who replied, "But there are so many. How do we pick out a few without slighting someone?"

We are grateful to our volunteers – all of you. It's easy to say, "Put me on your list", but it's another thing to say, "Yes" as you do and commit your time and energy to helping individuals.

Henry Davis Thoreau said, "One is not born into the world to do everything but to do something."

All the little somethings that you are doing make this community stronger, safer, and better. So, Thanks.

At Your Service

Meet Cecilia Dalzin

She is a licensed esthetician who has practiced skin care for more than 20 years in Washington, DC and Chestertown, MD. She graduated in 1968 from Von Lee International School of Esthetics in Baltimore, MD.

Cecelia Dalzin

Cecelia offers a special – "mobile foot care". She comes to your home and soaks, washes, and trims your feet for $44. If there is a medical problem, she refers you to a podiatrist. Cecilia's philosophy is a holistic approach to health. Her office is at 400 S. Cross Street, Suite 18. For more information about her skin care, check her website, CeceliaBotanicals.com.

Health and Fitness

Use It or Lose It

You've heard that old expression "Use it or lose it" -- the one that threatens mind and body stagnation if one fails to be mentally and physically active. Fortunately, that's not a danger here in Kent County where opportunities to "use it" abound.

Volunteer work is an excellent way to be useful and to meet new people. Local organizations that depend on volunteers to accomplish their mission include the Kent County Public Library, the Humane Society, the Chester River Hospital, the Food Pantry, and, of course, HomePorts!

Taking courses at the Washington College Academy of Lifelong Learning will keep you on your mental toes while offering you trips to points of interest during the fall and spring semesters. Joining a club or organization will connect you with people and allow you to pursue a particular interest or hobby. Check out the Kent County News for listings of the meetings and activities of groups that might interest you.

The importance of exercise to a healthy mind and body is continually emphasized in the media, and Chestertown offers several indoor exercise facilities for paying members. It is also a walker-friendly town, and the rails-to-trails program now in the works will certainly add to the possibility of getting good exercise at no cost.

And after you've experienced all that mental and physical exertion, don't ignore the benefits of some simple pleasures -- a meal out with someone you love, a weekend away for a change of scene, a relaxing massage.

Around Town

Wondering how to manage all that rain water coursing through your yard? Come and hear the next in the Go Green Programs series – Rain Barrels and Native Plants. Pam Harris of Chesapeake Conservation Nurseries will explain how rain gardens are a beautiful and colorful way for homeowners and businesses alike to help ease storm water problems and incorporate native plants into their gardens. See What's Up for details.

to make them thrive? Join your fellow HomePorts members for advice in assessing and repairing damage, choosing trees, and caring for trees, new and old, from Carl Gallegos, a HomePorts Board member, who worked with Washington College's Center for Environment and Society to develop a forest master plan for four towns in Kent County. This informative and practical presentation will be held on Tuesday, May 11. Refreshments will be served. (See What's Up.)
